India's primary concern use of Afghan soil for terrorism, says MEA

New Delhi : India's main concern in Afghanistan is the use of Afghan soil for terrorism or anti-India activities and it is too early to talk of issues such as any possible recognition of the Taliban regime, the external affairs ministry said on Thursday. New Delhi's position was outlined by external affairs ministry spokesperson Arindam Bagchi two days after the first officially acknowledged meeting between the Indian side and the Taliban in Doha. India is also focused on the evacuation of its nationals who are still in Afghanistan, he said.

Tuesday's meeting between India's envoy to Qatar, Deepak Mittal, and Sher Mohammed Abbas Stanekzai, head of the Taliban's political office in Doha, has given rise to questions on whether New Delhi has softened its position on the Taliban and could be considering the recognition of its new set-up created by the group in Kabul.

At a regular news briefing, Bagchi ducked all questions on whether India still perceives the Taliban as a terror group and on recognising any government formed by the group, and said: "Our main concern, one of the primary, immediate concerns is that Afghan soil should not be used for anti-Indian activities or terrorism against India. That is one of our main issues." India's focus is not on whether the Taliban is a terror organisation, and "the focus, let me reiterate, is that Afghan soil should not be used for terrorist activities of any kind or [for] anti-India activities and we will try to focus on that element", Bagchi said.

The Indian side has seen reports about formation of a government by the Taliban, but has no details regarding the nature of this dispensation, Bagchi said. He said there was "no update" on any invitation being extended to India to participate in the inauguration of such a government.

coocaa Transforms the Global Smart TV Market with Introduction of New Coolita OS

- Coolita OS is coocaa's first self-developed smart TV operating system, delivering a lighter, smoother, and more convenient user experience.
- coocaa enters a new tech territory with proprietary OS, highlighting its commitment to building a new smart TV ecosystem

Mumbai : coocaa, a leading provider of smart TV's, system R&D and content operating systems, today launched Coolita OS, the brand's very first self-developed smart TV operating system (OS), at the Coolita Global Launch event. Initially available in select Southeast Asian markets including India, Indonesia, Thailand, and Vietnam, the new OS is set to transform the smart TV experience, delivering a lighter, smoother, and more convenient user experience for today's Internet-driven generation. "We are excited to announce a new technology direction with the launch of our very own smart TV operating system, Coolita OS. This revolutionary new operating system is the fruit of our deep understanding of evolving consumer needs coupled with our team's rich engineering expertise and strong dedication to making smart TV experiences more accessible to all," said Raul Hua, General Manager of Coolita Global Business Department. "Through our ongoing innovation and strategic partnerships, we hope to create a bigger, better smart TV ecosystem, which will bring about new industry collaborations that will result in even more trendy and technologically advanced products for people all around the world to enjoy."

Driving Innovations to Fill the Industry Gap
The over-the-top (OTT) TV market continues to develop and expand across the globe, by and large due to the pandemic and the increased amount of time that people are spending at home watching TV. Although, smart TV's tend to be pricey owing to the complex hardware and software installed on them, many households in Southeast Asia are looking for budget-friendly alternatives that can satisfy their demand for access to quality entertainment, including TV shows, movies, games and more. In addition, those that are using smart TV's generally have three major pain points: a lack of TV memory space due to the size of the OS itself, frequent system freezes, and complicated user interfaces. Armed with these market findings, coocaa has launched Coolita, a new sub-brand that focuses on TV OS and services development, its proprietary solution to these evolving consumer needs.

Coolita OS 1.0: Delivering a "Cool & Clear" Experience for Consumers
Coolita OS is a lite Web OS built on Linux kernel that offers a lighter, smoother, and more convenient smart TV experience. With a "Cool & Clear" design concept in mind, Coolita OS 1.0 features a simplistic and easy-to-navigate user interface. Coolita OS 1.0 comes with an array of entertainment options and applications to enjoy. The latest YouTube 2021 app offers unlimited access to high-quality videos, while CC Plus, a comprehensive integrated streaming platform supported by Coolita OS, offers a range of global and local content with real-time updates, and customized content recommendations. With the exclusive CC Cast, a proprietary technology developed by coocaa, users can project content from an Android device onto the TV screen without any Internet or Wi-Fi connection by connecting to the local area network (LAN) from the TV. Other entertainment options include pre-installed lite cloud games, a built-in Internet browser, an app store and more. To accommodate the different needs of discerning consumers, Coolita OS 1.0 also features various user-friendly functions, including a Data Saver that provides real-time data reminders to help people easily manage their data usage, and an Eye Protection Mode to provide a comfortable and enjoyable low-blue-light viewing experience.
